Doe was just a young woman when the war broke out in her home country of the Democratic Republic of the Congo. She and her family were forced to flee their home and seek refuge in a neighboring country. But even there, they were not safe. The war had spilled over into neighboring countries, and Doe and her family were once again forced to flee.

Doe's memoir is a powerful and unflinching account of the horrors of war. She writes about the violence she witnessed, the loss of loved ones, and the struggle to survive. But her memoir is also a story of hope and resilience. Doe refused to give up on her dreams, even in the face of such adversity.

Personal Journey Through Violence in the Great Lakes Region of Africa is a must-read for anyone interested in human rights, conflict resolution, and the experiences of women in war. Doe's story is a powerful reminder of the devastating impact of war on individuals and communities. But it is also a story of hope and resilience, and it is a testament to the strength of the human spirit.
