

Encounters In Yellowstone: The Nez Perce Summer Of 1877

In the summer of 1877, the Nez Perce people were forced to leave their homeland in the Wallowa Valley of Oregon. They were led by Chief Joseph, who was determined to find a new home for his people in Canada. The Nez Perce traveled through Idaho and Montana, and they eventually reached Yellowstone National Park. This park had never been seen by white people before, and it was during this summer in Yellowstone that the Nez Perce had some of their most famous encounters with the US government.
