Gilmore was born in Montgomery, Alabama, in 1925. She grew up in a segregated society, and she experienced the indignities of racism firsthand. In 1955, Rosa Parks, a black woman, was arrested for refusing to give up her seat on a bus to a white man. Parks' arrest sparked the Montgomery Bus Boycott, which lasted for over a year. Gilmore was one of the leaders of the boycott, and she helped to organize and mobilize the black community. The boycott was a success, and it led to the desegregation of public transportation in Montgomery.

After the boycott, Gilmore continued to work for civil rights. She was a close associate of Martin Luther King Jr., and she participated in many of the major events of the civil rights movement. Gilmore died in 2016, but her legacy continues to inspire activists and leaders around the world.
