The sparrow flew to a nearby tree and perched on a branch. He began to eat the bread, but he was still hungry. He looked around and saw a group of ants carrying food to their nest. The sparrow flew down and stole some of the ants' food. The ants were very angry, and they chased the sparrow away.

The sparrow flew to a nearby field and saw a flock of sheep grazing. The sparrow flew down and landed on the back of one of the sheep. He began to peck at the sheep's wool, but the sheep was not amused. The sheep shook the sparrow off and chased him away.

The sparrow was now very hungry and tired. He flew back to his nest and went to sleep. The next morning, the sparrow woke up and realized that he had learned a valuable lesson. He had learned that it is not good to be greedy. He had also learned that it is important to be kind to others.

The sparrow decided to change his ways. He began to share his food with other animals, and he was always kind and helpful. The other animals were very grateful for the sparrow's change of heart, and they became his friends.

The greedy sparrow lived a long and happy life. He had learned the importance of sharing and kindness, and he was always grateful for the friends he had made.

Moral of the story

The moral of the story is that it is not good to be greedy. It is important to be kind and helpful to others. If you are greedy, you will not have any friends. But if you are kind and helpful, you will have many friends who will love and support you.
